Feedback about DPG?

Participant feedback

"Thank you very much to everyone who is involved in the process of compiling and running this incredible and invaluable Programme. I would recommend it to anyone who is keen to learn the fundamental tools required to become a competent trainer. My tutor was both a mentor and a friend and helped me to really enjoy the programme and reach my full potential".

Olivier Etienne, Nottingham County Council, 2009

"Completing the programme with DPG was one of the best moves I've made with regard to personal development. Many Thanks".

Andrew Brazier, Schering-Plough.

"I have really enjoyed the last 8 months - it has provided a great basis for my new career and I have developed a new love for learning new skills and knowledge - which has spilled into other areas. I have been very impressed with the whole course - everything about it has been put together in such a way to keep us developing our knowledge, skills and abilities to analyse our own levels of learning.

All of the DPG arrangements, paperwork and administration have also been high quality, and I have no hesitation in recommending DPG's Course to others (and indeed I already have).

On a final note I have found your tuition, encouragement, challenge, and mentoring to be excellent, and I will very much miss attending the monthly training sessions".

Dewi Hughes, Silverlock Training Ltd.

"I work with colleagues who are using a different provider they started in Feb 08 and will complete in Dec. I started in Mar 09 with DPG, and completed it on Oct 09! Not only that but with a much better result. The ongoing regular support and expertise to deliver this course make it really easy to get back into study".

Faye Leighton, MOD.

"This is a brilliant course! The content is very relevant and up to date with different learning practises and I felt I learnt a lot that I could now take into my workplace to help develop our department. I really enjoyed the fact that I could interact with peers working in training sectors in a wide variety of different industries. This made the content of the course just as useful as the course content itself.

Emma Dicken, Lavendon Access Services.

"I particularly liked the fact that the course is focussed on business needs and not a purely academic approach. This ensured that I learned skills and knowledge I could apply directly to my role, and which I'm confident will help to move our L&D function and the company forward".

Branwen Jones, Millward Brown.

"The course supplied me with good knowledge on what training is and how it should be designed. It was very useful and it provided me with the confidence, the skills and the knowledge needed to become professional in what I do".

Daniela Bultoc, University of Northampton.

Participant feedback about the programme facilitators

"An excellent facilitator. Knowledgeable, supportive, challenging and a great person to learn from."

"My facilitator was always approachable, explained things clearly and provided full support on projects. I have been on many internal & external courses and my tutor is the best facilitator I have ever worked with."

"The facilitator was fantastic and energised the sessions making them enjoyable whilst applying theory – very knowledgeable."

"An excellent, first rate facilitator. I learnt a lot from him, he has a very engaging style and would like to thank him for his continued support."

"My facilitator was always available to help out....really refreshing to have someone who supports you day and night!"

Background to the Certificate in Learning & Development Practice

The programme is available from DPG plc in two ways

3. Recording, analysing and using L&D/HR information
4. Supporting change in organisations
5. Coaching for Performance
6. Preparing & designing L&D activities

Certificate in L&D Practice Unit overviews

1. Understanding organisations and the role of human resources:

This unit provides an introduction to the role of learning and development (L&D) operations within an organisation and environmental context. By the end of this unit you will have developed your understanding of how HR and L&D activities support an organisation's strategy and assist the achievement of business objectives and how these are shaped by internal and external factors.

1. Developing yourself as an effective practitioner:

The CIPD has developed a map of the HR profession \(HRPM\) that describes the knowledge, skills and behaviours required by human resource and development professionals. This unit is designed to enable you to develop a sound understanding of the knowledge, skills and behaviour required of a professional practitioner, whether your role is generalist or specialist in nature e.g. in Learning and Development. This unit will enable you to develop a personal development plan, following a self-assessment of learning and development needs that meets your personal and professional requirements.

3. Supporting change in organisations:

This unit covers the main factors that need to be considered in the change process and will enable you to understand why organisations need to change with reference to key internal and external factors. Change concepts and different ways of managing change will be introduced. People also respond to change in different ways and this manifests itself in a variety of ways. This aspect will be given particular attention along with the implications for the human resources function. Throughout this unit you will develop a better understanding of the change process and enhance your ability to support your organisation and employees.

4. Developing coaching skills for the workplace:

This unit is intended to provide you with an introduction to the theoretical aspects of coaching and an opportunity to develop coaching techniques where appropriate, for example in the capacity of a line manager. The unit is also appropriate for individuals who support learning and development (L&D) professionals who have responsibility for developing a coaching culture/strategy within their organisations.

5. Preparing & Designing L&D Activities:

This unit provides you with the knowledge and skills needed to prepare and design effective learning and development activities. Undertaking this unit will enable you to understand how a learning needs analysis informs the design process. It will also address other factors that influence the design of learning and development. The unit includes some of the key educational theories and concepts that underpin the design process, for example adult learning principles; the learning cycle; and barriers to learning. An appraisal of the resource requirements to support learning is also included in the unit.

6. Delivering L&D Activities:

This core unit will provide you with the knowledge and skills required to deliver planned learning and development (L&D) activities, for example one-to-one, small group and large group sessions. The need for learning and development arises for diverse reasons, including both individual self-assessment and organisational assessment. A learning and development needs analysis may identify organisational challenges or problems affecting employees, for example major organisational change; the introduction of new operations or systems and/or the maintenance of existing operations or systems. The identification of learning and development needs may also arise during an induction process.

This unit will review adult learning principles and the learning cycle, but the main focus will be on the importance of creating and maintaining a positive learning environment and the knowledge and skills required for the actual delivery of an activity or session.

7. Evaluating L&D Activities:

Evaluation of learning and development is a key component of the learning process. This unit provides an introduction to the principles, purposes and scope of evaluation within a learning and development context. The unit also includes the concept of return on investment (ROI) and ways of assessing ROI within a learning and development and organisational context. Undertaking this unit will enable you to develop your understanding of different models of evaluation – you will learn how to use different evaluation methods with an understanding of the relative merits of each approach.
